THE startling news of the renewed outbreak of the yellow fever in Memphis, contained in our dispatches this morning, will attract the sympathy of the entire North for that doomed and unfortunate city. Our special intimates that the scenes The recollections of last year stare the The satuation of the water by the fatal or to have him murdered, so that they turn of affairs at Memphis, especially those places visited last year by the plague. In view of this experience it seems that the conditions of the appearthe presence of filth, but that its home is in the Mississippi Valley, where it thrives and feeds, and spreads dismay and death. With the revival of the fever excitement at Memphis, the cities that raised tine a few days ago will waste no ime to restore it, which will place the unhappy Memphians in a position deeply to such straits that the sectional feeling and political bias in the North gives way to the cry of the plague stricken people, and the on feeling of sympathy for humanity ponses to the Macedonian cry.

Later dispatches report the arrival Philadelphia, of the brig Shasta from Port au-Paux, San Domingo, with seven out of the nine men on board down with the vellow fever, four deaths having occurred, the Captain among the number.

That "murder will out" is a saying accepted as an axiom by the hundreds of thousands of English reading people. The records of crime, even in this country, do not, however, sustain the infallibility of the saying. A New York paper, discusswhilst in the large majority of cases the peretrators of murder are discovered and To confirm this, the startling statement is s morally certain that not a month, and perhaps not a week passes but some per-ooting was never known. A few years after, in the spring of 1836, book place the murder of Helen Jewett, which created an intense excitement. She was beautiful and accomplished, and well known unfortunated. was beautiful and accomplished, and well known, unfortunately, to the "fast men" of the metropolis, then a very much smaller city than it is now. Early one morning, smoke was seen issuing from her room. The watchman was hurridly called in, the games from the burning bed extinguished, and the dead body of the unhappy girl found, with a deep gash in the side of her head. A young man named Richard P. Robinson, whose pseudonym was "Frank Rivers," and who was known to have been intimate with Helen, was arrested. It was proven that he had at one time been much attached to her and that she loved him pasnately but that he had tired of her and was paying his addresses to his employer' chaughter, with a view to marriage. It was stated that Helen Jewett learned this, and wrote Robinson a letter threatening to exdays, and during which public veral ways so much excited that several into the several are and amiability were strengthe an alibi proved by three respectable per-sons; the Judge's charge was all in his later, and after a few minutes consultation the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty." Robinson was heard of after-wards in the West, but who killed Helen Jewett is still a mystery.

A murder took place eight years afterwards, on which Edgar Poe founded his rds, on which Fagar Foe founded his werful analytic story, "The Mystery of trie Roget." The victim was again a man, young and beautiful. Her name as Mary Cecilia Rogers. She was am-oyed in a Broadway cigar store. Her auty was remarkable, and she had natwas Mary Cecinia Rogers. She was an sporth also of spring wheat regions notherally scores of admirers. Not a breath of scandal, however, had tarnished Mary's fair fame. One Sunday morning, in June, 15t2, she left her mother for the purpose of spending the day with a relative and returning home in the evaning. The night proved tempestnous, and her failure to come back was accounted for by the natural supposition that she would remain all night at her relative's. The next day wore on and still Mary did not appear. Then her family became alarmed, it was as ascertained that she had it was as ascertained that she had not been at her relative's honse as all. No trace of her could be found from the moment she bade her mother good byz. Three weeks after her dead body was thrown up by the tide on the bank of the river at Weehawken. Around the neck was a piece of lace, part of her own at tire. It was wound so tightly as to show the contract of the week.

the poor girl had been strangled. It was evident also that she had been otherwise grossly treated. The most vigilant search was set on foot to endeavor to discover the author of this horrible deed. But he has never been discovered. It is still a mystery who killed poor Mary Rogers.

Not less of a stimulant to the public was the next mysterious murier; that in which the next mysterious murder: that in which Dr. Harxey Burdell met his fate. He was a middle aged man; a dentist in good practice. He boarded for some years in a house kept by Mrs. Cunningham. Other North for that doomed and unfortunate city. Our special intimates that the scenes of last year are to be repeated; and that distress, rule and mourning will follow in the wake of the dread disease is certaing it seems that the physicians of the city were over sanguine as to the hold the fever had taken, or else they kept the facts of the true situation of affairs from the public, mainly, we suppose, for the object of preventing a panic and to give them timeto organize to fight, the plague. It would be hard to realize the consternation that prevails in Memphis at the present time. The recollections of last year stare the The recollections of last year stare the people in the face, and with the memory of that season of death, not even the ties of friendship or family will deter them from fleeing from the breath of the deadly epidemic, which form the present outbreak will in all likelihood again assume. The situation of the whole South might be endangered by the fatal or to be a proposed to the top of the fatal or to be a proposed to the top of the fatal or to be a proposed to the control of the dead of the control of the dead of the control of the control

The latter immediately attacked Mr. Rogers with a knife, cutting him severely and repeatedly about the head, in the meantime grasping Mr. Rogers' watch and chain and pocket book. Mr. Rogers tore off the skirts of his assailant's coat, and then the robber gave his victim a stab in the abdomen, and both the strange men field. Mr. Rogers died soon. His pocket book, watch and chain were found in the thiel's coat skirt. The robber's hat was left on a the sidewalk. A number of persons were arrested, but the guilty man was never found. The city administration was in corrupt and vicious hands, and almost any rascal, who had money and political influence, could escape conviction for crime. Who killed Mr. Rogers is also still a Mr. And still a mystery is it, too, who murdered Benjamin Nathan, the well known and wealthy New York merchant. One of the murderers. Several criminals, well known to the police, were arrested, but not an iota of evidence could arrested, but not an iota of evidence could be found to implicate them. For a long time suspicion dwelt upon one of the sons of the deceased, who had the reputation of being dissipated and an unusually fast man about town, incurring his father's severe displeasure by his course of life; but this was only suspicion. The accepted theory is that one man alone, without any accomplices, committed the crime; that he entered the house by using false taxes and was enceaded in robber when out any accomplices, committed the crime; that he entered the house by using false keys, and was engaged in robbery when the old merchant discovered him. The blow with the heavy iron instrument was the readiest way of stopping the aged man's outery. What if it did kill him: the burglar had no doubt been already baptized in manslaughter.

This is the latest of the most state of the most state of the most state of the most state.

This is the latest of the most prominent 'unsolved mysteries" of New York's murder record. The red list extends to other American cities. Even New Orleans has her share in it. What a sid exhibit of the depths of depravity to which poor James Hes noon was human nature can descend. It requires rivermen, the faith, the patience, the philanthropy e and a Howard to believe that the beings who perpetrate the hor the door of the hotel where he lived, and that the beings who perpetrate the horman a public street, shot dead. Who did rible deeds of unbridled passion or malignant greed, are of the same race as Shakespere, Milton, Hampden, Washington, Lee. But Howard raised the wretches of the European dungeons up to the standard where they were recognized as fellow-men. Who knows what persever ing charity, philanthropy, morality, may yet do to transform the dark flood of crime's hirth into the crystal streams of true humanity.

They were largely entertained by the highest native officials. The dislinguished foreigners left Peking, June 10th for Tientsin.

Yokorama, June 20.—Gen. Grantarrived at Nagasaki June 21 in the Richmend, accompanied by the Ashucot, the latter bringing Judge Denly, Consul at Tientsin, and other friends from China. There was no formal demonstation by the foreign residents further than an address of welcome by a committee of thirteen to represent all alien nationalities. Owing to the prevalence of Cholera at Hiogo and neighborhood, the original arrangements were changed. The party will come direct to Yokohoma and Tokia. They are expected here July 4. Extensive preparations are being made throughout the vicinity. Although a guest of the nation, a separate complimentary demonstration is proposed by the Imperial decree, the reception to be in all respects identical with what would be accorded the reigning Monarch of any European country.

The conduct of the British Admiral is severely criticized. This officer left Hong Kong immediately before Grant's arrival there for Shanghai, and now he suddenly starts on a pleasure trip from Yokohama. It is understood to be in cansequence of an unwillingness to give a salute of guns. The British Ministers endorse his action by accompaning him on the present cruise. Gov. Hennessy, of Hong Kong, now visiting Japan, strongly disapproves, and is understood to have urgently favored the demonstration.

GETEWAYO'S PEACE ADVANCES.

LONDON, July 17.—Advices from Cape Town to July 1st, by way of Madeira, announcing an envoy from Cetewayo, reached Fort Napoleon on June 26th, bearing peace proposals and a fine tusk of ivory as a present. He wished to stop the advances of the second division, but was informed that peace proposals must be made to Lord Chelmsford, and the advance would only be postponed on condition that the former conditions were acceded to.

General Sir Garnet Wolsley has arrived at Pietermaritzburg.

Lord Chelmsford has joined the flying column and arrived at Magnibonia. He will probably reach Ulundi by the 1st of July. CEPEWAYO'S PEACE ADVANCES.

A dispatch dated Maritzburg, July 1st, says: Complying with the requirements of Lord Chelmsford, Cetewayo sent to the British camp the cattle demanded and also an ivory tusk. The commanding officer detained the cattle but refused to accept the tusk, which was an emblem of peace. Sir Garnet Wolsey immediately disowned this act and sent messengers to Cetewayo, explaining that the refusal of the tusk was a blunder and asked that three leading chiefs be sent to the frontier.

THE RAILWAY POLICY.

PARIS, July 17.—The great majority of the Parliamentary Committee, nominated yesterday to consider the policy to be adopted for railways connected at Orleans, are fayorable to the buying up of lines by the State. This disposition appears to be due to Bismarck's recent declarations, re lative to railways tariffs. The Chamber think that the Prench Government should tunk that the French Government should have absolute control of the French railway tariffs so as to be able to neutralize any attempt of Bismarck to establish a protectionist railway tariff. Gall's News-Letter, published at Kingston, Ja., in its issue of July the 3d, says: We learn by the steamer Jamaican which arrived here yesterday form Port-au-Prince that in consequence of a dispute in the House of Representatives, a brother of the President was shot by another member who took offense at the language which had been used. Mons Canal though wounded in the arm returned fire and shot his opponent. There was then a general firing in the House and the populace and the police outside fired into the building. The President of Senate with others were shot down and when the Jamaican left for this port the government troops were raking the streets with mitrailleuse.

The same paper, in its issue of July 8, says that by the arrival of the steamer Etna from Port-au-Prince on Sunday, we learn that a serious fire occurred at that place Monday, 30th. The fire originated from the discharge of shells in the town. Several blocks of buildings were burned, a number of lives loet and many wounded, the ishabitants having to take refuge in the hills. A wide-spread revolution was considered imminent. chair. The following was adopted unanimously:

"We, the undersigned, comprising a committee appointed by the workingmen of A. H. Andrews & Co., furniture manufacturers, to frame resolutions and decide a course of action relative to the eight hour movement begun by us this morning, represent to the firm of A. H. Andrews & Co., in behalf and with the consent of the workingmen, that they require that hereafter all employes of this factory shall work but eight hours a day, upon the basis of eight hours pay."

The committee submitted this proposition as the unanimous sentiment of the workingmen, and request a decision on the part of the same.

The committee also caution all workers in their line that they do not apply for work at this factory during the existence of this strike. The men want eight hours pay for eight hours work, and base their demands on the fact that other principal firms have acceded to the demands of their employes.

A sub-committee was sent to wait on A. H. Andrews & Co. with a copy of the foregoing resolutions and learn their ultimatum in the question. This committee returned and reported that none of the firm was present. They were instructed to go to the firm at 2 r. M. and report promply. The men say that if their demands are not considered immediately they will form a joint stock company and start a factory of their own on the co-operative system, which they say has been tried successfully at St. Louis.
